

At our request four of Ogden's esteemed citizens have contributed to write a symposium of opinions on the vital subject, "What the 4th of July means to me:

First—By Dr. A. S. Condon.
Second—By Dr. E. G. Gowans.
Third—By Prof. John M. Mills
Fourth—By a Woman.

4TH THE NATIONAL FESTIVAL.

What meaning has the Fourth of July to YOU, women of Ogden?

Does it call to your mind the names of Betsy Ross, Molly Pitcher, Barbara Fritchie, whose love of country made them the doers of brave deeds?

Does it make you think of the thousands of heroic women who stayed at home, and waited and toiled, or donning a nurse's garb went into prisons and on battlefields; while their husbands, sons and sweethearts marched off to war, to battle for their country?

Is Patriotism but a suggestion of love of country, that flames in times of war—but lies dormant all the rest of the time—needing the blare of the trumpets and the roar of the cannon to bring it to life?

Certainly not. It is a thing that should inspire us with a larger sympathy for humanity; with the determination to make our people more helpful, more kindly—the bravest, truest in all this broad land of ours.

It is the collection of individuals that makes the nation. And we, the women of Ogden, have a rare opportunity of fostering this patriotism!

Shall we meet the trust?

A WOMAN—A true Patriot.

SKYSCRAPER TO BE A NOISY CORNER

If the plans of E. H. Dundas, steel contractor on the Eccles building, mature, the business district will resound Monday with the noise of the compressed air riveters, handled by the steel workers. Should tomorrow be a favorably day, the riveters may be put to work at that time.

Four carloads of apparatus have been received within the last few days in anticipation of the finishing work. When the riveters begin work, additional men will be added to heat force. Men will be required to heat the rivets. Others will throw them into the operators aloft and each man operating a riveter must have an assistant.

Work is rapidly progressing on the Kiesel building. The dark red brick facing is attracting the attention of all lovers of the beautiful. These bricks were made in an Ogden brick yard and contractors and architects declare that no better colored red bricks can be found anywhere.

WATER POWER NOW BEING INCREASED

Within the next six weeks or two months, the Pioneer power plant of the Utah Light & Railway company, will be equipped with its new machinery.

Dredging of the reservoir in Ogden canyon has been completed, and the reservoir southwest of the plant is being built rapidly. Manager S. T. Whitaker states that the reservoir in the canyon now has a depth of 35 feet at the concrete base and there is an average depth of about 8 feet over the entire basin. This means a large supply of water when the reservoir is filled.

Water will not be turned into the great conduit leading to the turbine work of remodeling the jail, to include an emergency hospital, reading room and padded cell will begin soon, according to Chief of Police W. I. Norton. The city commission decided some time ago that such changes were necessary.

For the last few weeks, Hagbert Anderson, city jailer, has been spending his spare time improving the base-

A PRACTICE THAT SHOULD BE STOPPED

A stranger died in an ambulance while being conveyed from the city jail to the Dee hospital on Wednesday.

That was the simple recital of a tragedy back of which is a story of man's inhumanity. The dying man drifted into Logan a day last week, in a helpless condition. He was not wanted by the commissioners of Cache county, who, when informed that he could live but a few days, had the sufferer carried to the train, with a ticket for Ogden.

A dog would be accorded better treatment. A mangy cur in the street, struggling against death, would be comforted by the first person to observe his agony. The animal would be given succor and rest. Strange that in these days of high civilization money should count more than human life, even among those entrusted by law with the task of relieving the helpless in extreme distress.

The Cache county commissioners are not the only offenders of this stamp. From Rock Springs, Wyoming, indignants have been sent to Ogden to die. Not long ago a laborer, with both legs cut off, was hurried out of Wyoming, to become a public charge on Weber county.

This should stop, first, as it is a crime to thus mistreat any human being, and, second, because an injustice is perpetrated against those communities that seek to do right in the treatment of the afflicted poor who are without friends or home.

THE FOURTH FIFTY YEARS AGO.

Fifty years ago today the north celebrated the Fourth of July with patriotic fervor and great joy. It was the day after the defeat of Gen. Robert E. Lee and his southern army of 80,000 by the soldiers of the north at Gettysburg.

Up to that time, the southern troops had been driving the Union army to what seemed certain defeat. Wherever Lee had met either Burnside or Hooker, he had outgeneraled them. In December, 1862, Lee with less than 30,000 men, had defeated Burnside at Fredericksburg. In May, 1863, less than two months prior to Gettysburg, Lee whipped Hooker at Chancellorsville, though outnumbered two to one. The north had come to look upon Lee as invincible and when, on the first day of Gettysburg, the Union troops were driven back, the north again prepared to hear of a disastrous retreat. Had Lee won decisively at Gettysburg, there was nothing to prevent him marching on to Philadelphia, and levying tribute on the richest part of the north.

By the morning of July 4, 1863, word had reached Washington, New York and all the large cities in telegraphic communication with the battlefield that Lee's army had been defeated and was in retreat. That was the first thrilling news of the war over which the north could rejoice, and so the Fourth of July, 1863, was made memorable by the enthusiasm with which the day was celebrated by those who would have sacrificed everything for the Union.
